

Jeannine D'Addario
Global Vice President of Marketing & Communications

---

Jeannine D'Addario is a seasoned marketing and communications leader with broad leadership experience across multiple brands and products. She joined Whole Foods Market in 2014 and is responsible for all of Whole Foods Market's marketing, advertising and reputation management activities. She is also at the helm of the company's first national brand campaign.

D'Addario joined Whole Foods Market from Stanford Children's Health (Stanford University), where she served as chief marketing and communications officer. Prior to her tenure at Stanford Children's Health, D'Addario served as vice president of marketing at The Walt Disney Company, overseeing infant, toddler and preschool brands. D'Addario earned a graduate degree in business from The University of California, Berkeley, and a Bachelor of Arts degree from San Francisco State University. She also received a certification from Yale University's Graduate School of Management.